NOW IT IS GOO KIM

Vice-Consul Accuses a Youth.

SAYS HE THREATENED HIM

Charge is Not Proved—Yang Wei Fin and His Confere Buy Guns.

Mr. Goo Kim, Vice Consul of the Chinese Empire for Hawaii, called upon High Sheriff Brown yesterday and informed the latter official that threats were being made against his life by certain members of the local Bow Wong Wui. Goo Kim said the Chinese clerk in a law office, Goo Yuen, had made statements that he would be killed and that his death was not far distant.

When questioned as to where he had learned this startling information, the Chinese official said that he had two witnesses to prove the charges against the young man, who is Goo Kim's grandson.

The High Sheriff immediately sent an officer for Goo Yuen and he was brought into the presence of his accuser and the High Sheriff. He was told of the grave charge brought against him by his grandfather, to which he entered a general denial. He said he had made no such statements and asked to have the accusing witnesses brought before him. They were produced, and, under examination, they confessed that they were wrong in their statements about the young man.

The accused said that on Tuesday he had talked generally about affairs in China and at some length in regard to Leung Chi-so, but had uttered no threats against the life of Goo Kim.

Under the circumstances the High Sheriff explained to Mr. Goo Kim that he could not hold or arrest the young Chinese, as no evidence had been shown which implicated him in the least. One of the accusers was a Chinese employed at the Bank of Hawaii.

While Goo Kim Fui, the Vice Consul, feels that he is in danger, his younger but more important confere, Yang Wei Fin, still has troubles of his own. Yang has bought a gun and so has Goo Kim. Both examined a select assortment of weapons of American make in a hardware store and picked out revolvers that would make a Boxer turn green with covetousness. When you meet Goo Kim or Yang Wei on the streets these days you may be sure that each has a blunderbuss up his capacious sleeve.

Both say that the threats made against them are not idle but are animated by grudges resulting from the Bow Wong Wui.

When the Bow Wong Wui was organized by Leung Chi-so some months ago the Chinese Consul and Vice Consul bitterly opposed its being granted a charter. The Wui failed to get a charter and felt sore against the Consuls. Then the Wui's members got word that their relatives in China were being arrested and imprisoned by the Chinese Government on information furnished by the Chinese Consul, who sent the names and identity of the members of the local Wui to his superiors at their request.

Naturally they began to cherish a hatred for Yang Wei Fin. It was not pleasant to hear every steamer day that one's grandfather or grandmother or aunt or uncle had been seized and bastinadoed because his or her grandson or nephew in Hawaii was a disciple of Leung Chi-so. And when some man received a letter from his mother or father praying him to get them out of their predicament, the hot blood of the Bow Wong rose within them.

They say they have not threatened either Yang Wei Fin or Goo Kim. Individual members have been heard to say they wished both Yang Wei Fin and Goo Kim Fui had died of the plague, but these expressed desires may have been celestial pleasures. The Bow Wongs say that despite provocation that would cause a Laplander's blood to sizzle they will never resort to assassination.

"What!" said a prominent Wui man yesterday, "shall we place ourselves on a level with the officials of China and use their murderous methods? Never! They may slay missionaries, ministers and others, but we will not stain our hands."

Meanwhile Goo Kim Fui and Yang Wei Fin are watching their p's and queues.

JUST HEARD OF IT.

Fiery delegate (at Kansas City convention)—"Mr. Chairman, I rise to offer the following resolution as an addition to the declaration of principles already presented for adoption:

"Resolved, That this convention, evermindful of the ceaseless conflict between liberty and despotism, and burning with indignation at the encroachments of absolute monarchies upon the rights of man, does hereby extend its hearty sympathy to the people of Poland in their heroic struggle for independence, and we hereby demand that the government of the United States shall immediately and resolutely interfere in behalf of these, our brothers, who are—"

The Chairman—"The gentleman will pardon me for interrupting him, but Poland disappeared from the map fifty or a hundred years ago."

Delegate (sitting down)—"Maybe you're right, Mr. Chairman. I never heard of the country till the other day."

A ROYAL PLAYTHING.

A toy kitchen once owned by the Dauphin, afterward Louis XVI, is shown in the toy section of the Paris Exposition. It is furnished with tiny utensils, some of copper finely engraved, some of Saxony ware. A porcelain fowl is on a spit before the fire. Louis XVI was a great eater, but it is not recorded that he was possessed of culinary talents. His grandfather Louis XV, however, had, and was skilled in making ragouts and toasting pancakes. There was a kitchen where he operated close to his petits apartments.
